jack s journey is the moving and extraordinary story of an unknown anzac action at gallipoli during the period of the landing on 1 and 2 may 1915 kit cullen began tracing jack collyer’s story using his three diaries and his service record. The diaries cover the voyage from Australia to training in Egypt and Lemnos, and finally landing at Anzac. Unfortunately, the last diary ended as Jack entered the firing line on Bolton’s Ridge at dusk on 25 April. He was wounded a week later. Where was Jack, and what was he doing when he was wounded? What did Kit discover over ten years of painstaking research? It is extraordinary.

On 1 May, Jack and about fifty other members of No. 15 Platoon 4th Battalion were ordered to go to the aid of about 60 Royal Marines who had been trapped for two and a half days in an isolated trench. The Marines were running out of ammunition and water and needed support before dawn. Jack and his mates entered the valley which they christened death trap valley before dawn and positioned themselves in Loutit’s post overlooking the Marines for most of the day. Under heavy enemy fire, the 4th Battalion’s rescue mission was undertaken at the height of the third Turkish counter-attack. At 3 o’clock in the afternoon, the Anzacs were ordered to resupply the Marines with ammunition and water and to reinforce their line. So, meant running the gauntlet of the death trap, an exposed fifty-metre-long track marked by the Turks as a killing ground. As the Platoon braved the death trap, one by one, most of them were killed or wounded, including Jack Snowy Robson. Carried ammunition and water to the beleaguered garrison without being hit an hour later. He also guided and took charge of No. 3 Platoon 4th Battalion which was ordered into the valley to reinforce the isolated trench in all, Snowy diced the death trap six times. Five in daylight without being hit. The position and the Marines were saved. Five Allied Gallantry Medals were awarded for the action, including the First Victoria Cross at Anzac. Walter Parker, a Royal Marine stretcher bearer, was the recipient. Snowy Robson was awarded a Distinguished Conduct Medal for his feats. The other extraordinary aspect of the 4th Battalion’s participation in the action was the corruption of the historical record by Charles Bean. Bean omitted any reference to the 4th Battalion in his telling of the story in the official history despite knowing what happened instead. He gave the credit for saving the Marines to his brother’s unit, the 3rd Battalion which played a part on 2 May in relieving the Marines and the remnants of the two 4th Battalion parties. Bean misused a letter from the Royal Marine hierarchy specifically praising the 4th Battalion’s sacrifice and courage, claiming its sentiments for the 3rd Battalion. The tragic heroism of Jack and his mates and Bean’s historiographical skulduggery would have remained hidden if Kit Cullen hadn’t stumbled on them in the course of his research.

Chronicle of a mother’s grief after the death of her son from sudden infant death syndrome charts the author’s emotional journey and the impact that the tragedy had on her relationships and personal growth. In an introduction to the book, the novelist Susan Johnson states that it provides a powerful affirmation of life, a testament to the victory of the human spirit.
The Life and Death of Jack Straw 1901

On October 17, 1987, Jack Alan Davis Jr. disappeared. Five days later, his body was found at the bottom of a campus stairwell. By noon the next day, the county coroner announced he had too much alcohol to pass out and choked to death on his own vomit. Not everyone believed him. This moving and ultimately redemptive book tells the story of Jack, the student who died at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. His older brother, who was determined to find out how Jack died and of the tireless reporter who devoted herself to finding justice and truth for Jack's family. The true story takes readers from idyllic campus scenes haunted by imagines of senseless and brutal death to the coroner's examination room all while questioning how we treat the dead and how we treat those who survive as Marlene Gentilcore tells her readers in the final pages of justice. Looking back now, I realize that no matter the outcome of our courageous quest, we have lived the real American dream.

The Death Café Movement 2017-07-31

Jack Folly's book questions all the certainties of the life of this society in global terms highlighting how some values have been sacrificed in favour of the interest of the ruling class in maintaining control over the population and its human functions also recalling that nothing is lost and that the model of failure which now seems crucial can always be reversed jack folly tackles in an incisive and direct way all the hot and controversial issues of today s society from politics to economics from religion to music to school and the psychical analysis of human behaviour he touches on all aspects to be improved or eliminated in this world to make it ideal perfect and serene and we can learn by transmitting the awareness that this journey always begins with ourselves with our consciousness that first of all must be formed and educated to exist the real world exists it is within us jack folly is an italian dj condemned to death in the united states from his prison cell prisoner number 1309 is allowed one concession to broadcast the music of his life in a worldwide radio program jack is a man in his forties in his prime his solitary existence is within the confines of his 2m x 3m cell on death row at the maximum security prison alcatraz the notorious island penitentiary in san francisco bay jack unleashes his indignation for the world around him not the four walls of his cell that preclude him from society but society itself he denounces the socio political reality that he has known slapping it in the face for what it is jack knows what really counts in life and he knows what only deserves contempt what we must fight by infusing consciences with consciousness put it this way why would people give credit to the strong passionate opinions of a megalomaniac dangerous convict maybe even a serial killer jack is italian born to an italian father and a mother from new york he grew up in the vomero district of naples and emigrated to the united states following the demise of his relationship with his brother and all the dramas between them jack always the rebel had no qualms when he stole his brother s entire treasured record collection as a vendetta his highest motivation however was to escape from the climate of tension and drastic wind of change sweeping across italy at that time in april 2010 jack was the owner of a snack bar in central park new york and one night an armed thug tried to rob the day s takings from poor jack they start to fight jack is defending himself and the cash a shot is fired the criminal dies jack in his innocence turns himself into the police his honesty backfires on him and he is charged with murder sent to alcatraz and condemned to death execution by electric chair so this is where the radio program starts jack begins broadcasting worldwide spinning his tunes as a dj his music and words come via the radio in all sincerity and without fiction jack does not have much time left and nothing to lose jack uses raw and brutal language he can afford to look at reality in the face and lay bare the truth in front of your eyes awareness and to have a conscience is enough to improve society
